

The Author

Pia Herzog spent her childhood between cow paddock and building sites. She always thought that growing-up was more interesting than being a grown-up and has early on incorporated that into her stories. She lives in northern Germany and divides her time between her family, her practice and writing.

Blond is for good girls

Lu steals a bottle of pink hair dye from the drugstore. Her blond hair must go! Obstinate and gruff as she is, she continuously rubs people up the wrong way. Especially Christopher has it in for her and bullies her at school. Her only support is her invisible friend Rhys.

When Lu's mother asks her to look after Viola, her boss's daughter, everything changes. Following a major car accident, Viola has lost an arm and an eye. But sympathy is clearly not wanted—Viola is insufferable, destructive and riotous. During a joint holiday trip, the situation escalates ...

A friendship story that gets under your skin!

- Coming of age—realistic and enthralling
- Boxing instead of ballet—for tough girls with their own mind
- A special friendship - an explosive collision between two extreme characters
