

The Author & Illustrator

Antje Damm, born in Wiesbaden in 1965, is an architect by trade and a writer by choice. She lives with her husband and four daughters in the vicinity of Gießen. All of her books make it evident that she is very close to children and the way they think. The German edition alone of her question book, Ask me!, which has been translated into more than a dozen languages, has sold more than 70,000 copies so far.

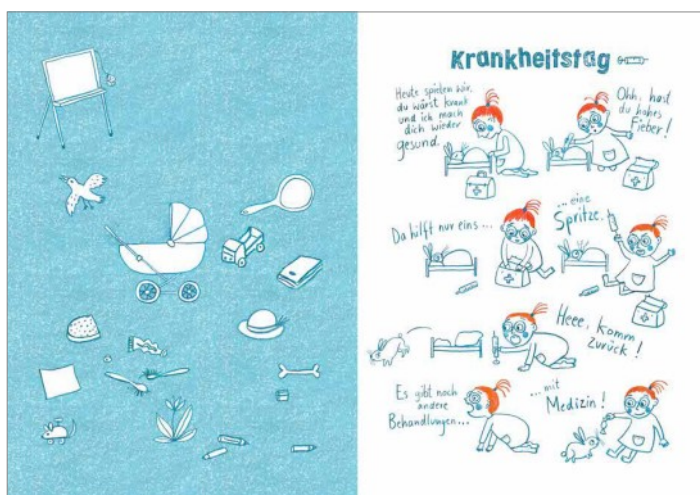

ANTJE DAMM

Every Day is Ida-Day

For Ida, every single day is like no other. If she wants to find out if earthworms have a bum, then that would be an explorer-day, for example. On a decision-making-day Ida will ponder the question of who she likes the most. On illness-day, Bunny receives an injection and he has a birthday, too, of course. (Whether Bunny is actually a live bunny or only a plush toy is only for Ida to know) On beach-day, Ida rescues a jellyfish. And it certainly is a sweet-day, when Ida discovers her mum's secret hiding place for chocolate ...

And one day, the 'day of the big question' will arrive. What will Ida be thinking about on that occasion?

Antje Damm's collection of episodes from Ida's life are delicious, because they get straight to the point. Children will love them; simply because they will be able to relate so well to Ida. And to her Bunny.
